Occasionally I have to move cattle droppings out of the way, and whenever I shovel bullshit I think of politics. This morning I happened to have my camera with me, so I took pictures while I worked. I'm cropping the crap now and I hope to recapture some of my thoughts from earlier.

For example, the bullshit at the left made me think of the debate last week, the first one between Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump. They dumped a bigger load than this on the stage, but neither addressed the question that's on everyone's mind: How the hell did we end up with Clinton and Trump?

Hillary Clinton should be running from the police, not running for office. She eludes arrest only because corrupt officials protect her. The Director of the FBI, James Comey, detailed the dozens of ways she broke the law with the email scandal, then he said that he wouldn't recommend charges. Sure, Comey owes his career to Bill Clinton, but give us a break, dude.

And speaking of Hillary's husband, he lied to us about Monica Lewenski, he was impeached for lying to congress, he raped multiple women, he was a frequent guest at Epstein's Pedophile Island, he's stolen money from disaster victims around the world, he sold HIV-tainted blood to the Canadians, and on and on and on. Ugh. The thought of the Clintons moving back into the White House makes me want to spew. Those two should have been fairly tried and injected long ago.

So what's our other option? Donald Trump. He's as cutthroat a businessman as you could ever meet. And now he wants to experiment on our country with his piratical business model. That might be acceptable if he were the anti-establishment candidate he pretends to be, but he's not anti-establishment. I can prove it with just two words: Rudy Giuliani.

Trump has made Rudy Giuliani a part of his inner circle. Giuliani was one of the players in the September 11 attacks. He was mayor of New York City in 2001, and he immediately ordered the steel from the fallen buildings shipped to China for recycling. Maybe someone like me could have made a mistake like that, corrupting a crime scene through ignorance, but Giuliani worked as a federal prosecutor for years before he became mayor. He knew that you shouldn't destroy evidence (steel beams scorched by cutter charges) during an ongoing investigation. He helped cover up the crime, and participating in the cover-up of a crime is part of the crime. So Rudy Giuliani might as well have wired those buildings for demolition himself. Trump should be ashamed for bringing a man like that onboard.

Damn. I hoped that writing about this stuff would make me feel better, but I don't think it's working. And the criminality this entry describes isn't even one oat in a shovelful of crap. A mountain of crap. The lawlessness displayed by the ruling elite is just so much to digest. At least cattle have four stomachs to do their digesting, or a long stomach that's divided into four parts. There...that's how I'll end this entry, by passing along a bit of knowledge about cattle. I can at least tell you something you might not be aware of. Cattle have four-part stomachs. The rest of the stuff I talked about you already knew.

I finished cropping the crap pictures today and I especially like this one. When I scraped the top off that turd I was struck by the bright yellow color inside. I made sure to get my rake in the photo because the rake's head is the same yellow as the interior of the crap. The word that came to mind when I first saw the interior was "fluorescent," then I thought "radiant," radiation, radioactive and so on.

The only radioactive turd in Texas at the moment is Ted Cruz, so I knew I was safe with my yellow one, but as I shoveled it into the cactus I thought of the Clinton Foundation's uranium deal with the Russkies. Hillary Clinton claims that Donald Trump is colluding with Russia, but her foundation recently helped that country secure about twenty percent of its future uranium supplies. Just do an internet search of "Uranium One" for stories about the deal. The end result was that Russia secured its nuclear future while the Clintons secured money. And now Hillary Clinton wants us to believe that it's Donald Trump who has ties to the Russians. I've noticed that the Clinton camp often accuses Trump of doing things that Clinton has done.

I liked ending the previous entry with the factoid about cow stomachs, so I'll end this one with a mention of mesquite grass. Some of the grass in these photos is the same type that Santa Ana's animals fed on during his march to Texas in 1836. The consensus among the Texians at the time was that he wouldn't be able to move thousands of animals northward in February without fodder, but they didn't figure on the hardy mesquite grass. Santa Ana got to San Antonio a month earlier than anticipated, and the ensuing battle didn't turn out well, for either side. The Mexicans won but lost hundreds of troops in the process. As a Mexican soldier said later, they couldn't afford many more victories like the one at the Alamo.

TUESDAY - October 4, 2016

I guess today's entry will be about camouflage. Look at how that turd blends in with its surroundings. Makes me think of Hillary Clinton and the Nazis.

Hillary Clinton is the first presidential candidate ever to compare her opponent to Adolph Hitler. That's how panicked she feels right now. Hitler was the leader of the German Nazi party during World War 2. He was a fascist, a bad man. And Clinton compared Trump to him.

For some reason American liberals love to equate Nazis with conservative Republicans, but Nazism was not a conservative movement. It was a left-wing movement. National socialism? Hello? Nazism required strong centralized government, the thing that Democrats offer us. Republicans want less government, not more. Republicans, for example, don't want Obamacare, which was called Hillarycare early on. Hillary Clinton is the one who first proposed forcing you to buy a product (health insurance) or pay a penalty. That is fascism in its most blatant form. Hillary Clinton, not Donald Trump, is the Hitler wannabe.

I wish I could think of a historical or scientific factoid to insert here, something to button up this entry, but nothing comes to mind. I expect this will be the last of my Bovine Opines. There's only so much you can say about bullshit.

Another debate's scheduled for tonight, but I already know how I'll vote. I have no choice but to support Trump. He has one very important thing going for him—he's not Clinton. Trump stopped the Bush dynasty, at least for a while, and maybe he can do the same to the Clinton dynasty. We've got to stop these criminal families from treating public office like their inheritance.
